They have discovered a soap mine near Hiko, Nevada, which yields an article possessing all the qualities of the best Castile. A similar mine is worked in California, though there the yield has been through a manufacturing process.

The headquarters of the executive committee of the Temperance Alliance of Missouri has been located at Mexico, with Elder John A. Brooks as chairman, Rev. J. H. Matthews, of Jefferson City, Secretary, and Captain John M. Gordon, Treasurer.

The editor of the Columbia Statesman wants somebody to bring him a load of wood, a half dozen chickens, two bushels of meat on six month credit, but we don't think they are likely to do it. Still there are people who run their credit with newspaper publishers for years for smaller sums.—Ez.

It will be remembered that Wm. O. Smith enticed Mrs. A. N. Sterling into his boarding house in St. Louis last April and attempted to cut her throat, injuring her severely but not fatally. Last week he was tried in the criminal court of that city and sentenced to the penitentiary for eight years—a light punishment for such a heinous offense.

Warrensburg Journal Democrat: "Time and again we have warned our readers against patronizing traveling vendors of quack nostrums, goods, wares, and numerous other worthless things, that are daily being forced upon an unsuspecting people by a horde of sharks, who live by the mistakes of honest people. Give the sharks a wide berth; have nothing to do with them; then you will be secure against their swindles. Patronize home dealers and drive peddlers from your doors."

Payette Advertiser: The festive mosquito now sharpens his bill in shady corners by day, and makes sad havoc upon damask cheeks and peach-bud lips by night. Oh! don't we wish we were a "skeeter," says a young man at our elbow. The crazy man (y) and widow with six children have been playing their game on the people of Marshall, Sedalia and other towns along their route West. Prosecuting Attorney Robertson has brought suit against the securities of Collector C. E. Barkhart for the balance due the county on his settlement—$28,040.74. Messrs. Martin & Priest, of Moberly, have been engaged by the county to assist in conducting the suit. We understand the Howard county bar have all been retained by the bondsmen, and they have determined to contest the matter, and if they can avoid paying the bond, they will do it.

Higginsville Advance:—From Mr. Stewart, of Brownsville, we learn that a shooting affray occurred at the picnic, given at Longwood on Saturday last. It seems that an old feud existed between John Serber and a man named Morgan. Serber approached Morgan on the day of the picnic, and offered to apologize if he had offended him in any manner. Morgan said he wished no apology, and added that he intended to thrash Serber. A hand to hand struggle ensued, and Morgan threw Serber, and was following up the advantage gained by pounding Serber severely, when a younger brother of the latter rushed to the assistance of his brother, and shot Morgan in the back. The ball entered below the right shoulder blade and ranging upward, lodged beneath the skin above the right nipple. It is feared that the wound will prove fatal. George Serber fled immediately. A vigorous pursuit was commenced the following day. All the men are young. Comment is unnecessary. It is the same old story so often repeated, and its repetition may be looked for as long as the carrying of concealed weapons is so generally indulged in.

Of all the stimulants, opium is the most injurious to the human frame. Many a man kills himself by too great indulgence in alcohol, but alcohol never eats into the vitals of a man or woman like opium. Opium is more gentle, is taken in private, and the world sees it not, but here are its disadvantages in the supreme degree. Drinking may be a vice, but there is something like sociability connected with it. Opium eating is wholly selfish. It just kills. It is a fact that men will have a stimulant, and the more they are repressed in one direction, the worse they become in another. Discretion in this, as in all things, is the better part of valor.

Two Fools.

A fool named Johnson, in Saline county was handling a pistol in the presence of his little daughter, the other day, when the pistol exploded and killed the child.

Yesterday morning a man 34 years old named Rosenbaum, got to scuffling with two young men in his own parlor in St. Louis, whom he playfully put out of the room. He then picked up a pistol and dared them to return. One of them, Edward Wild promptly accepted the challenge entered the room, drew his revolver, didn't know it was loaded, and playfully shot Rosenbaum dead. They were cousins—Moberly Monitor.

We have been wondering for several days past who would be the first man to bring us a watermelon. We'll wait and see.

State School Statistics.

Oranges and lemons, as we receive them are gathered before they are ripe so as to prevent the chances of their spoiling on the journey home. So well and neatly are they packed that it is seldom there is much loss on this score, which is saying something for the gatherers and packers of about two million bushels of these fruits, which is about the annual quantity imported into this country. The mandarin and tangierine are stated to be the best varieties of the fruit. The true St. Michael's is rather small, with thin, pale yellow rind, and very sweet, seedless pulp.

How to Keep Cool.

Sit on a cake of ice and try to counterfeit the expression of an Esquimaux dog in a similar position.
Leave off your vest and scarfpender and ensconce yourself in the breezy solitudes of a commodious linen duster.

Go out into the woods with a pretty girl, and allow her to fan the mosquitoes off your noble brow.
Sleep on the roof of a piazza and gaze at the trembling stars while the south wind wafts to your intoxicated soul the amorous trillings of a tom cat.

Sit on a book again—he is the coolest animated thing known.
Pour cold water down your back.

St. Joe Gazette: The prettiest little story of the season is told by the New York Tribune about a Missouri preacher's wedding, at Worcester, Mass., last Saturday evening. The Rev. Mr. Munson, of this State, advertised in the morning papers that in the evening he would preach a sermon in three parts, in the Advent Chapel. He went into the pulpit and preached a sermon, the first two divisions being "Repentance" and "Holiness or Sanctification." He then opened the Bible at Matthew xxv., and proceeded to read the parable of the ten virgins. At the sixth verse, "And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him," he stepped down from the pulpit, and a lady stepped forward from one of the front pews, and taking the Bible, proceeded to read from the seventh to the tenth, inclusive. Mr. Munson then took the lady's right hand, and said: "And I now before God and these witnesses do take this woman, whom I hold by the right hand, to be my lawfully wedded wife, to love and cherish her as my own body until Christ shall come to claim us with all saints as his own bride, or until death shall part us." The woman said: "And I now take this man to be my lawfully wedded husband, to love, reverence and obey him until the Lord himself shall descend from heaven, with a shout and with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, or till death shall us sever." They then knelt and the man offered prayer. After the prayer Mr. Munson returned to his desk and closed his discourse by urging the importance of being ready for the coming of the Lord.

Veterans of the war of 1812 are dying off rapidly. Roll call at the Paris, Ky., reunion in June of last year, showed 51 present; the same roll this year showed 19 present, the other 35 having died.
A child three years old was dying of scarlet fever. She lingered long, and the last day of her life she was unconscious for hours. Many times her mother tried to rouse her, but in vain. She seemed to be sinking away in death without a token of recognition. Suddenly she opened her eyes wide, lifted her head and looked around the room as though filled with wonder and delight. She clasped her hands and cried eagerly to her mother, "Oh, mamma, see the beautiful children!" Her mother said, "Where?" "Oh, all around," she replied, and she turned her head as though she saw them in every direction. No written words can describe the rapture of her looks and voice. "They are coming, they are coming, they are close to me," she said in a transport of joy. She put up both hands, laughing out with that gleeful, ringing sound peculiar to little children, and then she died.—Ex.

A Ghostly Lunch Fled.

From the Dispatch (Ind.) Gazette.
A highly mysterious event is reported as having happened recently in the family of a very respectable widow of this city, of which no explanation has yet been made. The affair is so well vouched for, and the character of the family in which it occurred so good, that the natural tendency to suspect deceit in the matter is partly, if not entirely, checked. The story runs thus: The lady mentioned, whose name for good reasons is not given, was engaged one evening, in the presence of her two daughters, in baking pan-cakes for tea, when suddenly, without any visible agency, the cakes disappeared from the griddle, before the faces of the astonished lookers on, who searched in vain for traces of the strangely acting flap-jacks, and even went so far as to call in the neighbors to seek an explanation of the phenomenon. None of the family are believers in spirits, but so much was the lady affected by the event that it was with difficulty she could be persuaded to refrain from moving out of the house under the belief that it was haunted.
A Georgia farmer uses a novel fertilizer. He kills snakes, lays them in the furrow, and then plants corn on them. These snakes are made to produce corn, which produces whisky, which in turn produces snakes again.

A Veteran of 1812.

The following notice of an old Kentuckian, well known to many of our readers, we slip from the St. Thomas (Ontario) Journal.

"A remarkable man passed through St. Thomas last Friday over the Canadian railway. His home is in Lexington, Ky.; he is in the eighty-eighth year of his age; his mind is as bright as a mirror, and his life is part of his country's history. This man is Thomas P. Dudley. He is a Baptist preacher of the Old School, still in the active ministry; he serves four churches, to one of which he drives 25 miles; and over one church his father and himself have presided as pastors for an uninterrupted period of almost one hundred years. His father was a soldier of the Revolution, and it was his uncle who commanded the American troops at Dudley's defeat. Six of the seven brothers took part in the war of 1812. Two of Two of them fought at River Raisin, two at Fort Meigs, two at Moraviantown and two at New Orleans. Thomas P. Dudley was at the first and last. They had a two days' engagement at River Raisin, and on the second day he was wounded and taken prisoner. Himself and three comrades were confined in a room of the Red tavern in charge of three interpreters. Nearly the whole British force marched off to Fort Detroit leaving only a small guard over the prisoners. Two days after the battle—January 28, 1813—the Indians, freed from civilized restraints, began the butchery of the prisoners. They entered the room in which Mr. Dudley was confined and struck their tomahawks into the skulls of his comrades. No hand was raised against him, but he was stripped of coats and boots and laid out into the street, to stand stock still in the snow. "The tomahawking and scalping went on around me," said he, "I soon concluded that they were reserving me for torture." Two savages came up, pointed to the bloodstain on his shoulder, and walked away. A third one—a young brave—did the same thing, smiling a friendly smile and said: "Me save you." And he did. He returned in a few minutes accompanied by his father, and after giving his prisoner a blanket, a pair of moccasins, a red apple and a damb of war paint, marched him off in the direction of Ft. Detroit. They walked 36 miles and halted at one o'clock. The evening was spent in dressing six or seven scalps of butchered Kentuckians, which were stretched on small hoops and strung on small hoops and strung on a stick. In the morning Mr. Dudley was given another damb of war paint, and his head was copiously adorned with eagles' feathers. Thus disguised, and made to carry the scalps of his comrades at "shoulder arms" order, he was marched to the fort. "I tell you it was a hard trial, and my temper almost got the mastery over me as I reflected upon what my mother might say to see me bearing such a trophy. The sight of the strong fort which our general had surrendered only intensified my feelings; but I was helpless, and with a strong effort I controlled myself." In the fort his wound was dressed by a British surgeon, and next day he was moved across the river to Sandwich. Thence he was taken over Longwoods road to Fort George at the mouth of Niagara river and paroled after a few weeks confinement. Subsequently he was included in an exchange of prisoners, and joined the army of the South. He was quarter-master general at New Orleans, and took part in the great battle fought there. "I surveyed the field after the battle, and I felt that the butchery of the River Raisin was avenged." Elder Dudley must have been a man of prepossessing appearance in his prime. Though somewhat bent, he is still fully six feet in stature. His face is intellectual and finely cast, and he has the bearing and manner of a gentleman. His memory is wonderfully retentive. He has read no book for the past six years, owing to failing vision; but the Bible is as familiar to him as household words, and in sermons of an hour's time he quotes the chapters and verses without a single lapse. In discourse he is very vigorous, fluent and logical; he is never involved or obscure; and he says what he intends in polished Anglo-Saxon. He has been a steady and extensive contributor to the publications of his church for almost half a century, and his writings are marked by the same strong individuality as his sermons. "His writes and speaks what he feels and believes."

The woman of curiosity will be made happy by the report that there is now a very interesting group of spots on the sun.

On his return from Washington Senator Vest being interrogated by a Post-Dispatch reporter concerning his silver resolutions, said:

"We would have passed it the other day if either Bailey, Ransom, or Wade Hampton had been there. They all told me they would have voted for it, but they came in just after the vote had been taken. The vote of either of them would have carried the resolution. It will pass this fall without doubt."
"Bayard had decided at one time to vote for my resolution, but he changed his mind. Had a long talk with him on the subject, and he looks at it from the standpoint of an Eastern man. He knows nothing of the condition or needs of the Western people. I am in favor of paying the bondholders in the money they agreed to take—that is, the old silver dollar or its equivalent. The old silver dollar had 412 1/2 grains. Bayard is willing to have silver provided the dollar shall be made equal in value to a gold dollar. He wants a silver dollar to have 440 grains; I want it to be 412 1/2. That is just the difference between us, and it is irreconcilable. I think a silver dollar is one thing and a gold dollar is another."

"What are Bayard's chances for the Presidential nomination?"
"None; there is not the least prospect for his nomination."

"What of Tilden?"
"Tilden hasn't three friends in Congress and he will never receive another Democratic nomination for President."

"Who is the coming man?"
"Thurman. He is the strongest man we have, and he has the best chance for the nomination. He is going Democratic, and that will put Thurman right to the front."

"But is there not some bad feeling between Thurman and Ewing and the friends of each?"
"No, that's all settled. I have talked frequently with Ewing. I am his friend, and I know how matters stand. There is no trouble between them, and Ewing's election means the advancement of Thurman."

The LaPlata Home Press very sensibly remarks: "The best thing the Commissioners of Immigration can do is to devise some means and recommend them to the people of the State where by county, city and township bonded indebtedness can be adjusted, compromised or put in such shape that it can be paid without totally impoverishing the people. It is idle to invite sensible people to immigrate to a country and invest their means in property over which there hangs municipal indebtedness in annual millions and millions. What we need more than immigration is something that will satisfy and make content the people who now live here, and stop the annual exodus to Kansas, Nebraska and the territories. We hold that a country that is sufficiently populated to support mills, schools and churches accessible to all is sufficiently populous to support a government. If it be thought that Eastern folks and foreigners can be induced to come here simply to aid us in lifting mortgages and paying taxes that we are unable to pay, it is well now as at any other time for us to lift the veil and be deceived no longer. Just and equitable propositions of compromise should be made to the bondholders, and we are satisfied that our indebtedness can be shaped so that it can be paid without material damage and then we can invite immigration and in doing so can make a truthful exhibit of our financial status, and point with pride to an unimpaired credit. This, and this only, is the way to invite and secure immigration, and will be worth more to us than all the immigration laws that can be passed. Macon county should take the initiative in this matter."

Sedalia Democrat: The milch cows of Sedalia are suffering from a prevalent disease, which is attributed to the foul water they are forced to drink. No less than a hundred animals are troubled with it. The first symptoms are watery eyes, which are followed by swelling of the head, fever and loss of appetite. Mr. Wharton, who is an old stock man, says that an application of a solution of sugar of lead is the best remedy that can be applied. Almost every one is using the milk of these diseased cows, and it is no wonder there is so much sickness.

Scene.—Hotel reading room, Gentleman: "I beg your pardon, but where in the hell have I seen you before, sir?" Gentleman (looking up from paper): "I am sure I can't tell. What part of hell are you from, sir?"

The Baltimore News is of the opinion that the "Ohio idea" is that every man in that State shall be the next President of the United States.
